For the 'Journal.' THE BEREAVED MOTHER.

O, Mother, 'teft of every gem
That shome in beauty round thy way;
Of flowers, nursed by the parent stem,
And fondly sheltered from decay,
Beneath its own procecting shade,
—It accemed those blossoms could not fade, Eut Death with tyrant sway, Called for his wreath erch little guest.
Mother, v here wilt thou turn for rest? Mother, viere wilt thou turn for rest I Not to the sky, for it hath bent The same wild beauty o'er the dead; And now thy quivering heart is rent, Each ray of glory, far hath fled. In vain it hangs its softest blue Above thee, eyes of softer hue,

A gettle radience shed, And made thy pathway bright and blest; The beauteous sky will bring no rest. Spring, with her blossoms rich and fair,
Will wa've but acquish in thy heart;
The brightest flowers that needed there Just spread their petals to depart;
And Semmer with her thousand beams

And Summer with her thousand ocams
Of joy and hope, will bring sad dreams;
There wat not what thou art.
When Summer winds thy cheek caresse
And woke glad music in thy breast. When Sammer winds thy cheek caressed, And wake glad music in thy breast.

Not all the glories of the year
Can sill thy soul's deep yearning voice; chase from thy cheek one briny teat,
Or make thy mourning heart rejoier;
The forms of thy Imneued ones
Unto thy soul to choice,
Will ne'er depart, the thrilling tooes
Unto thy soul to choice,
Will clied pike Hedgelungs to their nest,
And bring thee but a moorrful rest.
The rising son will bring but grief,—
He for thy treasures looks it win;
The siture moonbeams nor relief
Can give to that deep three of pain;
The starry host will tread the sky,
Innoviced by thy tearful eye,
And music's southing surviue.

And mosic's southing sursin
Hang idly on the enreless ser;
Its notes have lost the power to cheer.
O, is there nought can give thee peace?
Pale mounter, is there not a balm.
To bring thme anguished soul release,
And o'er thy sprits breathe a calm! I
There is a rote that sweetly swells
O'er sorrow's wildest, darkets spells;
A voice that can disarm
Death of his sting and give thee rest,
O, listen to the glad beheat!
White soul warms the tender child,

My kingdom blooms with flowers so young Thus spake the Lord and sweetly smiled, While to his breast an infant clung; I bear them to my upper clime,
Above the stormy shores of time;
And o'er each bud is flung
In the bright gardens of the free,
The robe of immortality.

The rote of immortancy.

O, heed the voice; and though alone
Thy bark speeds o'er life's foaming sea,
Inv for the racsomed, senseless ones Thy bark speeds o'er hie s numer.

Joy for the raconned, senseless ones
Will fill itsy soul with melody;
Thou with not mourn bereft of hope,
For Christ his stores of love will ope,
And allow his hofty throne;
Before which bask thy dear ones, blest,
O, mother, Christ will give thee rest.

A SOJOURNER.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR. SANTA CRCZ, (W. I.) January 31, 1845. arked in a former letter, that the I remarked in a former letter, that the fruits of this island, abundant as they are, I remarked in a soluted reter, both the fruits of this island, abundant as they are, have no comparison, in value, with our own. Not are our odvantages, in other respects, over those enjoyed in tropical climates, less matked and decided. Segar, rum, and molasses are the only expontable products of this island. Pout Rico adds coffee, and Cuba tobacco, to their sugar staple. But each of these islands are indebted to us for the 'staff' of life.' We supply them also with satted provisions. And for every species of manufactured articles they look either to Europe or America. Nor, taking the year through, is even their climate to be preferred to our own. The winter months may be delightfully passed here, but the islanders are as anxious to escape from the burning suns of June, July, August, and September, as we are desirous of avoiding the frosts and snows of Januery,

The planters are now busily engaged in making sugar. Their wind mills from every eminence, are plying merrily. We have rande the acquisitance of several planters, from whom we have invitations to visit their estates, the drives to which, upon mag bificent goald, shaded by cocco-nut, tamarind, orenge and lime trees, are exceedingly picturesque. The accoa-nut grows from forty to sixty feet high, the trunk of which for thirty feet is without branch, limb, or leaf. The tree is not only an overgreen, but is for ever road-side. There is also the silk-tree, (the largest upon the island.) with a large trunk and capricious, but wide-spreading branches, which furnish a grateful shade. The cabwhich throws a grateful statute. The case-bage tree, of uniformly graceful symmetry, is bighly ornamental in groves and gardens.— The body looks as if it came from a mould or The body looks as if it came from a mould or turning-lathe. The machineel, by its fragrant dors, invites you to repose under its shading branches. But there is poison in its taste or touch. It bears an apple of such delicious flavor, that the templation to 'eat thereof' is very strong. But this may not be done with impuoity. Indeed, if you take shelter from a shower under this tree, drops of rain falling from the leaves upon your bands, its little-entry.

You are less exposed to danger and anno ance from reptiles and insects here than nost other tronical climates. There are no enomous snakes, crocodiles or alligators here. The Lizard abounds, but it is not only harm-less but useful, in the war it wages upon musquitoes. Doct. Stevens, an eminent phy-sician, of whom I shall have occasion to speak sician, of whom I shall have occasion to speak again, who has a favorite seat for study and repose, under the generous foliage of a tamarind tree, has fixed a shelf to the tree, near his head, where he feeds the lizard, and where they, apparently in return for his bospitality, sit catching and driving off the musquitoes, &c. &c. while their protector remains with them. The Centipede, whose bite is worse than that of a wasp, crawlainto your bed or clothes occasionally, but not often.—Musquitoes are 'plentiful,' (as the negroes say,) quite blood-thirsty, and sing as hatefully as those we encounter on a Canal Boat upon the Cayuga marshes. But if they get their infernal fangs into us during the day and evening, they are prevented by an impensivable net which curtains our beds, from making night either hideous or horrible with their music or their sing. But the insect most to be dreaded is the Chico, or 'Jigger,' that steals imperceptibly into the foot and there deposites eggs which if not seasonably removed, produce 'Elephantiasis,' a disease which dooms the human body to drag a foot and leg which, in size and form, resembles that of the Elephant. Shetch of the Life and Character of
FINITE AMES
In Dedham lived the Hon. Fisher Ames.

In Dedham lived the Hon. Fisher Ames. This gentleman was born April 9h, 1758, of respectable parents and was educated at Harvarl College, where he took the degree of A. B. in 1774. He then commenced the study of the law; and soon after he began the practice. was regarded as an advocate of distinguished talents. In 1788 he was chose an ementer of the Convention, for tatifying the Federal Constitution. The following. the Federal Constitution. The following year he was elected a representative from the district of Suffolk to the national legislature; and was regularly re-elected during the presidency of General Washington. In all these situations, he distinguished himself by sound wisdom, most impressive eloquence, immovable, integrity, and exalled patriosim. After his epected northe necessity of making appropriations for carrying into effect the treaty with Great Britain, delivered April 28th. 1790, one of his antagonists objected to taking 1790, one of his antagonists objected to taking the vote, which was to decide the question at that time; because the house was burne truo, one on ins antagonists objected to taking the vote, which was to decide the question at that time; because the house was horne away by the power of his eloquence. From this period be generally declined public business on account of the imperfect state of his health; yet he several times accepted a seat at the council board. This, however was obviously done to serve his country; not to gratify himself. He loved retirement; and delighted in his family. For public life, at the same time, he had little relish. During his retirement, however, he never forgot the interests of the dangers of his country.—Feeble as he was, he published a few years before his death, a series of political essays, which were then highly esteemed as specimens of original thought and superior wisdom. Few men have so much good sense as Mr. Ames possessed; and none with whom I have conversed, a mind so ready to farnish at every call the facts which should be remembered; he truths which should be tremembered the truths which should be tremembered; he truths which should be urged; language in which they might he clearly and forcibly expressed; and images with which they might be beautifully adorned flis imagination was perhaps too brilliant, and too rich. It would hardly be said, that any of the pictures which it drew, were ill-drawn or out of place; yet it might, I think, be trudy said, that the gallery was crowded. The excess was not, however the consequence either of a defective taste, or a solicitude to sline; but the produce of fancy ever creative, ilways exuverant, and exerting its powers more easily in this manner than in any other. To speak and write as he spoke and write, was only to permit the thoughts and images, which first offered themselves, to flow from his lips or this pean. his lips or his pen.

Mr. Ames was distinguished by a remarkable and very amiable simplicity of character. In circles where any man would have thought it an honor to shine, and where he always shone with superior fastre, he appeared en-tirely to forget himself, and direct all his observations to the entertainment of the comobservations to the entertainment of the com-pany; and the elucidation of the subject.— Wherever he conversed, it was impossible to fail of receiving both instruction and delight. But the instruction flawed not from the strice of taleats, nor the ambution of being brilliant. Whatever was the field of thought, he expan-ded it; whatever was themsed discussion, he gave it a new splendor: but the manner in which he did both showed irresistibly, that they were the most obvious and the leas laborious employments of such an understand-ing and such a fancy.

His moral character was still more estima-Ilis moral character was still more estimable. His integrity appeared to be direct without effort, and without deliberation; it appeared to be straight because it had never heen warpep; to dictate what was right, because it had not learned to do what was wrong. His sense of rectitude, both public mit personal, was not only exact, but delicate and exquisite. His patriatism was glowing.
As a public man, Mr. Annes was an object both of envy and praise; but I should more strongly covet his private character.
Of the inspiration of the Scriptures he was

The Divinity of the Savior he admitted without a question, and it would seem, from a minute investigation of the subject

AN ELOQUENT PREACHER.—There scarcely an intelligent reader who has not heard of the Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, of Philadelphia. He is pastor of the Indepen-dent Methodist Church, North 11th street. dent Methodist Church, North 11th street.—
His name has been th-day called to our mind, in consequence of reading a just tribute to his exalted abilities as a pulpit orator, from the columns of the Clincinnati Herald. Its editor when lately in Philadelphia, heard him on the great subject of Christ's ascension—and he thinks it one of the finest specimens of pulpit oratory he ever listened to. In his fine passages of spiritual sooring, he hell a dense ruddiory in "breathless" silence. He spoke as he advanced, of the 'expecting array of saints and angels, the chariots and horses of fire;"— the cloud, dark beneath, but reflecting above, he glory of heaven; the passe of the Savior, the glory of heaven; the pause of the Savior, when the cloud had received him, while the celestial host stood silent, as he gazed once more on familiar scenes-Nazcreth, his birth-celestial host stood silent, as he gazed once more on familiar seenes—Nazereth, his birth-place, the temple in which the had taught, the desert where five thousand had been fed, the mountain of prayer, the grave of Lazarus, Getilsemane and Galvary.

Then began the ascent; the throng following, passing worlds upon worlds in their upward flight, far above all principalities, and powers, and thrones, and dominions, till the gates of the Eternal City were reached, whom with electric power, he introduced the sublime gates of the Eternal City were reached, whom with electric power, he introduced the sublime colloquy in the Psalm, "Lift up your heads, yo everlasting gates, and let the king of glory in!" He seemed to gather power as he rose into the heaven of heavens. His tall slender form stretched to its utmost height; his eyes flashing as with the splendors of eternity.—Every stroke of the pencil brought out a new feature—added a richer glow; every tone became more and more rapturous, till the assent was completed, and the gates closed on sent was completed, and the gates closed on the burning throng.

I drew a long breath, and felt as if I should be glad to descend. But no!—the preacher paused for a moment, as if gathering strength for a bolder flight, and then called his auditors to go with him to the glories of the connation. I will not attempt to give even an tidea of this crowning effort. One would almost imagine that Milton had risen from the dead, and in his lofty diction was revening the mysteries of the inner sanctuary. Without doubt, Stockton surpasses all men I ever heard, in a rich, bold, and well proportioned imagination. For were it not for its exact proportions it would seem, beyond measure extravagout. But, in his highest soaring, he moves with such ease, poises himself so dexterously, that the circle of the heavens seem to be his natural elements."

THE CHEROKEES.—A letter recently received in this city, from an eminent third of the Cherokee nation, represents that people as already somewhat excited by apprehensions of the effects of the annexation project upon their peace and welfare. I may be remembered that in consequence of the filling up of the Mountain Counties of Georgia, and the adiacent proting of Tenessee, the Cherothe adjacent portion of Tennessee, the Chero-kees found themselves surrounded by evil-disposed whites who, while in fact not half so civilized as the Cueiukees, or capable of te-coming as good cliizeas, deceived and bultied our Government into forcibly removing from their homes a people whom they were bound by treaties older than the Government tiself to protect and defend in the quict cajayment of their ancestral possessions. When the Cher-okees removed West, their present territory was guanateed to them for every teatherady was guanateed to them for every teatherady or the traces of the prinoval forest have dis-appeared from their fields and plantations, a large party in Arkansas is clamoring for their removal yet farther West !——If Texas be annexed, without some very decided action on the part of Congress, completely surroundcivilized as the Caetokees, or capable of Le on the part of Congress, completely surrounding the new Cherokee Country with our settlements, it is obvious that these poor victims of civilized and Christian rapacity will soon be compelled, under some pretext or other, again to surrender their pleasant homes to the again to surrender their pleasant homes to me rapacity of the border run-sellers and the gangs of white vagabands who live around and upon them. Is it not possible that there may yet be found virtue and intelligence in our People to deteat some one scheme of rapacity and National clime? [Trib.

SCIENCE FOR FARMERS.—Whoever takes a loo in his land, or puts a seed into the ground, engages in the most important of the ground, engages in the most important of the stream of the seed in the second whether a farmer choosers on not—whether he knows it or not—he is daily and hourly working with principles of science; he is performing practically what the philosophers and the second with the chemist tries experiments with and labors to understand in his fields by those wonderful operations which the most learned men often most desire to witness.—They who have most thoroughly learned the learned men often most desire to witness.—
They who have most thoroughly learned the nature of the earth, air and water, light and heat, and studied most about the growth and nature of plants, are the men who most feel the need of those observations which the farmer has the best opportunity to make, as hie work is among the scenes when the plants grow, the rain falls, and the sun shines.
Nothing is plainer to the farmer than that the students need such opportunities of observing and such experience as he enjoys. No-ving and such experience as he enjoys. No-thing is more common than to hear him say so. He often condemns the writers of agriiso. He often conderns the writers of agricultural books and newspapers, for not going to work, instead of confining themselves at home; he sees and feels the reason why they should look at every subject on both sides;—and doubtless, if more men who study, should at the same time direct and engage in the labors of the field, they and the world would be the gainers. Some have occasionally been heard to say so, who despise all 'book farming,' and believe that practical experience is every thing. Let us look a mourent at that every thing. Let us look a moment at that question.

A plant in the dark grows white. What is the reason of that? A seed faid by in a dry place will not aprout; but moisten and warm it, and it soon begins to grow. The heads of wheat lately taken from the wrappers of an Egyptian mummy, have grown and produced seeds of their owns, after two thousand years or more. Why is that? A care of come, lorger, or any they plant, in one crop of corn, clover, or any other plant, in one eason gets a thousand of ten thousand pounds of charcoal from some where. Where does it come from? Not from the ground, for it was not there. Ah! we need the aid of science to explain it.

St. Louis is overflowing with prosperity—according to the last Republican. We notice by its statistical tables, that there was erected, during the last during the last year alone. 1146 buildin Of these, many were churches, public ces, and costly private residences. But great as the improve ment was in 1844, it says the amount to be expended in building, in 1845, will quite equal it. Many blocks of houses, for business purposes and private resid nees are already commenced or projected; and it is estimated that 40,000,000, of brick will be is estimated that 40,000,000, of brick will be required for the consumption of this year—Of course, a very large amount of mechanical labor with be required in and about the erection of three houses. We copy the fullowing caution to dry goods merchants, lawyers, physicians, &ce, of whom, it would seem, there are more then enough; the work of the work o of business do uot hold out like encouraging prospects. So many new dry goods and commercial houses have been opened liere, within the last two years, as, in our opinion, to have gone beyond the actual consumption of articles of trade; and there must be a pause, until emigration shall capply the accessary demand, and authorize the location of new business men among us. We say this in all sincerity; for otherwise many, who have directed their attention to this section of the western country, might be induced, by the generally prosperous condition of our city and State, to determine on emerging in commercial pusuals here. ommercial pursuits herer We might add another last word. Our

We might add another last word. Our city is overflowing with professional menawyers and physicians; and there are so many accessions, as to require from us a warning voice to those who may yet desire to come. In both of these professions, it is an exceedingly difficult thing for new content to make their way. The whole ground is pre-occupied. There is more than a sufficiency of talent and industry; and many respectable men are necessarily kept, by causes over which they have no control, from that prominence and usefulness which they deserve to attain.

THE EXCISE LAW.

A bill has passed the Assembly of

A bill hay passed the Assembly of this State, with great unantimity, and there is every reason to believe that it will also pass the Senate, essentialty modifying the law regulating the sale of ictoxica ting liquors.

The provisions of this bill are in substance as follows:

1. Special town meetings are to be beld in the several towns in this State, no Teesday better the first Monday in May, at which the electors are to vote by ballot, on the question of 'license,' or 'nn license.'

2. The vote first taken upon this question, is to stand for one year at least, and until one fourth of the electors of the town shall petition the proper authorities, for a second trial, when a new election is to be beld. A new election not oftener than once a year may be held to vote upon the question, as often as the requisite number of electors shall petition for that purpose.

3. If a majority of the people vote 'license' the board of excise are to exercise the same powers in granting or reliaving tavern licenses only as they now have. No grocers' licenses are to be granted, No pay to be required or taken for granting any licenses.

4. If the people vote 'no license,' then none are to be granted, and the retailer of are to be granted. No pay to be required or taken for granting any licenses.

4. If the people vote 'no license,' then none are to be granted, and the retailer of liptors, will be liable to the penalties now imposed for selling liquors without license.—Physicians are allowed to prescribe for meditional purposes.

5. If the Overseers of the Poor neglect, for to days, to prosecute for the penalties imposed by law for selling liquors, any citizen may do so, in his own name, upon giving security for the costs of sut, in case of a failure to recover. One half of the penalty goes to the prosecutor in such cases.

This law, if it guestate effect, will undoubtedly work a great revolution in the business of selling ardent spirits. We are so confident that the judgment of the people, is ripe, to put down the infamous traffic, that we shall hait the day, when they shall be permitted to take into their own hands, the whole matter, as one that will banish from our border, much of the pauperism, crime and taxation, which now meet us at every corner. We believe the influences of seuch a law will be highly beneficial to the best interests of the whole medicand on the pauperism, crime and transitional contents of the good results of the pool r

Death of a Senator.—Hon. I SAACE. BAYES one of the Senators in Congress from the state of Massachusetts, died at Wushington, on the

The disease of which helied, it is said, was aggravated by the intense excitement and anti-ny uni-re which he labored during the few last days of the session of the late Con-

Mr. WEBSTER pronounced an eloquent Eulogy upon his rharacter, and the Senaire as a utark of respect to his memory, passed resolutions customary on such or casions, and adjourned. His remains have been taken to his late residence at Northampton, for inter-

To Teachers.—Composition, is a branch of education meriting much more attention than it has hitherto received. Nothing it more common than for individuals to manimore common than for individuals to manifest their regret, for having neglected its rules and practice when young. I can't write a letter, is an expression which has often fallen in sorrow from the lips of many persons in other respects, well educated and accomplished. It may not be policy for you to resort to any compulsory measures, for its introduction into your schools; but the efforts of those multi-wine may be willing in employ, them sloud he heeded; for experience soon render; it a delightful employment. One of the great advantages arising from composition, is, the constant demand which it makes upon the store of knowledge treasured up from the pursuit of other studies; indeed, it may be considered a practical test which tries the pupils upon them all. It subjects their orthography, etymology and syntax for example, to an ordeal of the right character.

Scholars are canable of composing at an Scholars are capable of composing carlier period in life, than is generally earlier period in life, shan is generally sup-posed. Some of our distinguished authors, indited many of their works when quite young; and who shall say what some of your juvinile charge may oot hereafter accom-accomplish, if they are only started in the right direction by your aid and assistance.— Happy will it be for them, if you succeed in turning their youthful efforts into the proper channel!

in turning their youthint eltorist unto the proper channel!

Some parents perhaps will object to having their children give any attention to this subject, on account of the multitude of different pursuits already followed in our schools; but you have only to convince them, as above hined, that it is merely a practical applica-tion, or review of the others, and their objec-tions will be readily surmounted.

For me to lay down any specific rules for your observance, would perhaps be altogether superfloors. You will find a great variety of them in your text books, but, after all, the pupil's advancement will depend mostly upon your own ingenuity and skill in teaching, independent of any formal guides. I would observe, however, that the too common method of originating topics for each jupil to write upon, should be avoided. It is quite as important for them to designate their own subjects, as to write upon them, when selected by others.

In conclusion, the only object in view in addressing to you this heatily penned article, is, merely the awaken your minds to a department of instruction which I deem important. That any thing novel has been advanced, is not pretended.

Ruode Island.—The Dorr party held their Convention last week and resolved to go into the Election this Spring upon the sole issue of the "unconditional liberation" of their incarcerated leader. They nominated for Governot Citallers Jackson, Esg-a-Whig. This was done in a the hope of dividing the Law and Order party, a portion of whom are understood to be in favor of Dorr's liberation. The Providence Jaurnal speaks thus of the nomination of Mr. Jackson:

We regret exceedingly that Mr. Jackson

we regret exceedingly that Mr. Jackson should acrept, if he has accepted, the nomination for Governor. We regret that a gentleman of his distinguished ability, and for whom personally, we emerain so high a regard, should throw himself away in a cause when should throw himself away in a cause when he acretain of defeat, and where success would lead only to disgrace; but if he chooses his position at the head of the Darrite Party, he must expect to be lied to it. He cannut plend the prominent position which he has accounted in the Whig party, and in the Law and Order party—he cannot plend any conservative view which he may personally entertain—he must be estimated by the party of which he stands out the representative, and that party is the Darite party.
